FORMIDABLE DEFENSE OF HUN DEMOLISHED

GERMANY NOW HAS NO POSSIBLE POINT ON WHICH TO MAKE STOP

Cambrai Entirely in the Hands of the British, Making Victory Seemingly Complete.

(Par Associated Press)

The formidable defense system between Cambrai and St. Quentin has been finally broken by the British, and French troops are out in the open country eastward in pursuit of the retiring enemy. Cambrai appears to have fallen and the British are making a victorious advance in the direction of St. Quentin, the only known German defenses of the front of the line in the Somme river.

The German generals and officers are rapidly thrusting back to make a last stand of defense. Along the valley of the Somme, large scale fighting is going on. German losses are reported as being heavy. The British appear to have broken the German defenses completely.
